

Fly Fishing

Fly Fishing is the most enduring of all outdoor pursuits. Stalking trout in the fresh rushes of a mountain stream, with just rod, line and fly, is uniquely restoring. So much beauty is imbedded in each still frame of movement: the space created by line soaring over water; the momentary still as the line reaches out and lays its prize gently in front of the waiting trout; the rush of water as the trout crashes down upon the fly; the whine of the reel as the line plays out amidst the fight of the fish; and the magnificent beauty of the captured trout laying in the net as it eyes you, awaiting your next move.

Introduction to Fly Fishing

Casting a caddis on the Deschutes

Laurie Adams has been fly fishing throughout the West for over 15 years. Using techniques developed by world fly casting champion Joan Wulff, Laurie in one afternoon can transfer to you the core casting and fishing techniques needed to effectively fish common and difficult waters. From basic knots to common casting methods, from fish spotting, to equipment selection, Laurie shares a full range of skills and methods needed by the angler.

The lessons are targeted at beginning fly fishing, for men or women, and are meant to be a comprehensive introduction to the sport. Long experienced anglers however are not disappointed, almost always finding new techniques and ideas.

Lessons are available by appointment only and each class is limited to four people. Private lessons may also be arranged.
